This is 39th ave in front of my house. This road is usually very active and is never quite, but because covid 19 the streets are empty and quite. Everyone is staying inside helping stop the virus which is working to keep the city of Vernon safe.

When this event is written about in history books of the future, what parts of daily life might be missed?

The parts missed in history books of the future of this picture might be the fact that it seems way worse than it seems. Cause it just looks like that's it just a little city and that no one is outside. People of the future might just thinks that's it is a small deal, compared to other pandemics that have happened in the past. (Spanish flu, black death and Plague of Justinian).

What is one thing that we didn't expect to change, but did?

What i did not expect to change was the environment. The environment has become super clean during this pandemic, because no one is using their cars and that's is helping to keep the earth safe from climate change.

Who's story is being told? What morals, ethics, or values are being communicated through the picture?

This is in a viewpoint of someone living on the streets. There are millions of people living on the streets and they have no protection against covid 19. Not like us we are living inside with some protection of the outside world.

Take a picture of an expected or unexpected consequence of the pandemic.

Again the environment is way cleaner then it was before the covid 19 pandemic.
